OpenAI made 'many changes' during talks with US, says Altman

Company unveils ChatGPT Work, an agent that can field tasks for hours

LORELEI SMILLIE
July 9

OPENAI CHIEF EXECUTIVE Officer Sam Altman said his company made "many changes" during its discussions with the Trump administration before moving ahead with releasing its newest artificial intelligence models to the general public. In an interview with CNBC on Thursday, Altman said the ChatGPT maker had a "collaborative back and forth" with top US officials, including Commerce Secretary Howard Lutnick and Treasury Secretary Scott Bessent, in the weeks leading up to the wide release of GPT-5.6.

The new family of models was initially limited to select partners following pressure from the Trump administration to stagger the release. GPT-5.6 is set to be made available to the public on Thursday,

SAM ALTMAN, CHIEF EXECUTIVE OFFICER, OPENAI

I think that's good as long as the process is understandable, fair and quick. The government seems to really share those goals and my guess is our next time through, our next model, it'll be much smoother...

after OpenAI said it received a green light from US government leadership. OpenAI rival Anthropic PBC was briefly forced to disable its Fable 5 and Mythos 5 models after the Commerce Department imposed export controls to ban foreign access to the models. The restrictions were overturned late last month following weeks of discussions that led to Anthropic creating additional cybersecurity safeguards for its technology. Altman did not detail the changes that OpenAI made during the process, but said the government is testing new models and looking for potential problems. "I think that's good as long as the process is understandable, fair and quick," he said. "The government seems to really share those goals and my guess is our next time through, our next model, it'll be much smoother. We understand it and know how to go with it better." In the interview, Altman also appeared to push back at recent reports that OpenAI had proposed giving the US government a 5% stake in the company, noting there were "a lot of inaccuracies." —BLOOMBERG

NYT-led body for sanction on OpenAI

BLAKE BRITAIN
July 9

A GROUP OF newspapers, including the New York Times and New York Daily News, asked a federal court in Manhattan on Thursday to sanction OpenAI in their high-stakes copyright dispute for allegedly lying to the court about its ability to search its systems for proof that it misused millions of their articles in AI training.

The newspapers told the court in a filing that OpenAI falsely told the court it could not search its large language models for their copyrighted material while hiding that it had done so "even before the first News Plaintiff filed suit." The newspapers said that OpenAI had also deleted billions of relevant ChatGPT conversations or made them unsearchable. They asked the court for sanctions, including attorneys' fees, and a court finding that OpenAI's chat logs showed that the company misused their copyrighted works. Spokespeople for OpenAI did not immediately respond to a request for comment on the motion. The lawsuit, first filed by the Times in 2023, accused OpenAI and its largest financial backer Microsoft of using millions of its articles without permission to train the large language model behind OpenAI's popular chatbot ChatGPT. —REUTERS

Spain's defence stands unbreakable

SANDIP G
New Jersey, July 9

ALL EYES WERE ON the curly-haired wunderkind Lamine Yamal during a training session at La Masia. But the eyes of Barcelona manager Xavi Hernandez wandered to a lean, tall figure with boyish looks. He summoned a youth coach by his side and told him he wanted the boy to train with the senior team the next week. On the day of training, when Xavi entered the training ground, he was there with a warm smile and introduced himself in a firm tone: "Hi, I am Pau Cubarsi." Xavi was impressed. "He had none of the shyness you think of when a teenager called for his first training with the senior team," the manager recalled to Spanish outlet MARCA.

In months, along with the wunderkind Xavi had visited the academy to check out, Cubarsi became a regular in the senior team. After his debut, a Copa del Rey game against Unionistas de Salamanca, Xavi told the media: "With Lamine Yamal, he would mark an era." He was only 16 then, but in Xavi's assessment, he was already a leader. "He doesn't seem 16 when you speak with him." The pass-master's words were not hollow. In only three years, since debuting under a child protection protocol in 2022, he has become the cornerstone of the stingiest defence in the World Cup. Five games on, Spain have the most impenetrable defence in the tournament.

His control is impeccable; passing accuracy nearly perfect.

Across the tournament, Cubarsi has attempted 449 passes, missing just 17, giving him an exceptional passing accuracy of 96 per cent. Five of them were key passes. He became the quickest to five clean sheets, striding past Italian metronome Paolo Maldini. "It's not an individual thing, it's a collective effort," Cubarsi deflected the glory to his teammates after the Portugal game.

It's both individual and collective, as all sturdy defences are. Laporte, his side-kick, is as silken as Cubarsi. He defends without violence, without strained sinews. Before he fell out with Manchester City manager Pep Guardiola, the latter would rate him the finest left-footed centre back in the Premier League. "He reads the attackers' intentions even before he (the attacker) had decided his plan of action." He has lost some of his speed to injuries, but is arguably the best around in positional play and in one-on-one situations. Flanking them are Marc Cucurella and Pedro Porro, the team's metaphorical hitmen, painting Spain with a nasty streak, streaming through the wings with their purposeful sprints and capacity to make both underlapping and overlapping runs. The defensive unit has a personality to match their skills. None of them have looked frazzled under the pressure of the World Cup. Belgium free-wheeled against the USMNT; they benched Kevin de Bruyne. Perhaps, they would reconsider him to bypass the languidly dogged defence of Spain. The highest praise came from Austria's tactician, Ralf Ragnick. "I cannot remember any unforced errors they made. We attacked them and challenged them; we were brave, but we could not always prevent this combination tactic. They are a perfect clockwork," he noted. And at the base and heart of it is a 19-year-old whose voice is most valued in the locker room.
